Call for Collaborators – Birmingham Manufactures and Workforce

Are you researching the workforce in Birmingham's manufacturing industries? Would you like to get a better look at Birmingham Museum's collection and archive? Then we want your help!

The Birmingham Manufactures project is inviting proposals for contributors to a guide to the collections to be launched at the final project workshop on the 29th March 2018.

Two 'object in focus' days will be held at the Museums Collection Centre in February (dates to be decided with collaborators). You will be asked to put together a 500 word summary of your research for the guide and to present your research at the workshop on the 29th March.

We are particularly interested in research which focuses on the lived experiences of those employment in Birmingham's manufacturing industries. The experiences of women and BAME people are particularly under-represented in the stories we have so far.

If you are interested in contributing, please submit a 200 word overview of your research interests to tessa.chynoweth@birminghammuseums.org.uk by the 9th February 2018.
